Counterculture Cream Chandelier

The Counterculture Cream Chandelier is a throwback to the days when macrame was all the rage. The three-tiered chandelier is made of cotton thread that is woven into a pattern and onto a metal frame in a white finish. The hanging hardware is a clean rod rather than a chain for an updated contemporary feel and the bulbs are LED. This fixture, designed by Ian Thornton, will be a chameleon of design depending upon the style of the room it illuminates.
