Westmoreland Cabinet

The Westmoreland Cabinet is an interpretation of a blanket chest from the Williamsburg Museum collection. Inspired by the 18th century, it is scaled to sit perfectly under a 21st century flat media screen. Each of the three doors has an adjustable shelf to accommodate any modern media component. The slat back of the cabinet allows easy access to component wiring and provides ventilation to help keep your audio/video components cooler. Made of mango wood with a light grey stain and matte finish simulating weathered wood. The oversized pulls are solid brass with an antique nickel plated finish.
